
Literature Annotation: The Biggest (and Best) Flag That Ever Flew by Rebecca C. Jones (Tidewater Publishers, Centreville, MD, 1988). Young Caroline Pickersgill lives with her mother and grandmother in Baltimore, Maryland. Mrs. Pickersgill, a widow, supports herself and her daughter by making flags for the ships that sail into the city. Some soldiers from Fort McHenry come to her to order the biggest and best flag in the world, and Caroline helps to make it. When the British sail up the Chesapeake Bay to destroy Baltimore during the War of 1812, the defenders at the fort beat them back. After the British sail away the next day, the flag gallantly streaming over the fort is the one Caroline and her mother had sewn. "By the dawn's early light," Francis Scott Key saw it waving "o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Motivation
Distribute Student Resource Sheet #1: History Impression: The Biggest (and Best) Flag That Ever Flew. Have students work with partners to brainstorm the possible connections between the chain of clues on the worksheet. In the “text guess” section of the resource sheet, they should write a paragraph that represents what they think today’s lesson will be about. They should use all of the words in the chain and in the order that they are represented. Have partners share their predication summaries with the class.

Development
1. Tell students that they are going to be learning about a woman named Mary Pickersgill and how she contributed to events that took place in Baltimore in 1814.
2. Students should have a working knowledge of the War of 1812. If not, pages 93-94 in The Maryland Adventure by Suzanne Chappelle give a nice summary of the War of 1812 and the role that Maryland played in the war.

3. Tell students that you are going to read The Biggest (and Best) Flag That Ever Flew by Rebecca Jones. As you read, they should jot down notes on Student Resource Sheet #1 about the significance of the key terms.

4. After reading, ask students to share the information that they learned about the various key terms on their History Impression.

5. Tells students that Caroline’s mother was Mary Pickersgill. Distribute Student Resource Sheet #2: Mary Pickersgill to student pairs. Have students read the biography and add new information to their History Impression.

6. Tell them that Mary Pickersgill created goods (flags) for the Baltimore community. (You may need to review goods and services with students.) Ask them to brainstorm other goods that may have been produced in Baltimore during the early 1800’s. What services may have been provided? Distribute Student Resource Sheet #3: Goods and Services in Baltimore, 1812. Display a transparency of Student Resource Sheet #3: Goods and Services in Baltimore, 1812 and begin a master list of goods and services.

7. Display Teacher Resource Sheet #1: Baltimore Directory, 1812: Title Page. Tell students that much like the phone books of today; large cities had Directories that listed individuals with their name, occupation, and address. This is the cover page for Baltimore Directory for 1812. Display Teacher Resource Sheet #2: Baltimore Directory: List of Householder’s Names. Have students find Samuel Allen. Ask: What is Mr. Allen’s occupation? (painter & glazier) Does he provide a good or a service? (service) Add these services to the master list.

8. Tell students that they are going to be examining pages of the 1812 Baltimore Directory in order to identify additional goods and services available in Baltimore during Mary Pickersgill’s life. Divide students into 7 groups. Distribute one of the Baltimore Directory pages to each group (Student Resource Sheets #4-10).

9. Each group should review their assigned pages and record the goods and services found on Student Resource Sheet #3: Goods and Services in Baltimore, 1812.

   Teacher Note: See Teacher Resource Sheet #1: Key to 19th Century Terms for definitions of obscure terms.

10. Display the definition of specialized work. As a class, come up with examples of specialization from the life of Mary Pickersgill and the Baltimore Directory.
11. Tell students that specialization leads to interdependence. Display the definition of \textit{interdependence}. Discuss.

12. Distribute one specialized worker card from Teacher Resource Sheet #4, to each student. In their small groups, have each student identify their assigned worker and discuss how that worker was interdependent on the other workers in the group.

13. Bring the class together and have them sit in a circle. Have students participate in an "Interdependence Web" Activity. Hand one student a ball of yarn and have them identify their specialized worker and say what that worker is responsible for. For example: "I am the spectacle maker and I make spectacles for the citizens of Baltimore." The student then chooses another specialized worker and rolls the ball of yarn to them. As they are rolling the ball of yarn, they will identify how they are dependent on that worker. For example: "I am dependent on the printer to print advertisements for my business." Each student will do the same thing. As more and more students follow, they will notice that the class has made a "web" with the yarn.

Assessment

Have students respond to the following prompt.

You are a young person living in Baltimore in 1812. Write a journal entry describing a typical day in your life. Your journal should include a description of:

- at least one good that you and your family use
- at least one service that you and your family use
- the specialized job held by your father or mother
- how your father or mother’s job is dependent on other specialized workers

Closure

Have students revisit the paragraph that they wrote from their History Impression (Student Resource Sheet #1). Direct them to rewrite their paragraphs based on the information that they have learned in this lesson. Discuss.

Mary Pickersgill

A resident of Baltimore for more than fifty years, Mary Young Pickersgill was a successful Baltimore businesswoman. However, Mary Pickersgill’s greatest contribution to Maryland and to the entire United States was as a flag maker during the War of 1812. The flag she made became the inspiration for Francis Scott Key to write the poem that has become the national anthem of the United States of America. Today that flag resides in the Smithsonian Institution’s National Museum of American History.

Mary Young was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in 1776. She learned the flag-making trade from her mother, Rebecca Young, who made ensigns, garrison flags and continental standards during and after the Revolutionary War. Her family first moved to Baltimore, Maryland when she was a child. In 1795, she married John Pickersgill and moved back to Philadelphia until his death. Mary returned to Baltimore in 1807 with her widowed mother and young daughter, Caroline. In her home at 44 Queen Street (now 844 E. Pratt Street), she established a flag-making business, where she successfully supported her family, by designing, sewing and selling “silk standards, cavalry and division colours of every description,” including signal and house flags for the U.S. Army, U.S. Navy, and merchant ships that frequented Baltimore’s harbor. By 1820, she was able to purchase the house she had been renting and lived there for the remainder of her life….

…While her business success deserves acclaim, Mary Pickersgill’s national contribution was making the 30x42 foot American flag that flew over Fort McHenry during the 1814 Battle of Baltimore on September 13th and 14th. The United States was at War with Great Britain and Baltimore was preparing for an eventual attack. Major George Armistead, commander of the forces at Fort McHenry, commissioned Mrs. Pickersgill to sew a flag “so large that the British will have no difficulty seeing it from a distance.” She was able to hand sew the flag in just six weeks with the help of her daughter, two nieces and two African American servants. It contained over 400 yards of fabric; each stripe was two feet wide and each star measured two feet from tip to tip. The result was an enormous American flag that could be seen for miles from the Fort. When the British attacked Baltimore, Francis Scott Key saw Mrs. Pickersgill’s flag while he was held captive on a British ship and was inspired to compose the poem that became the national anthem of the United States...
